

Taking The Risk To Awaken

Meeting with Desthein

Talk followed by Q&A
Saturday February 28, 2015

To respond to the “invitation of life” is to take the risk that one’s personal life may crumble. Awakening will take place when the dreamer comes to the realization that their view is merely an interpretation, superimposed over the truth of life. To awaken is to see clearly and directly, without any intermediary.

Since Desthein's books became available online, people from all over the world have begun to deeply resonate with his message. Desthein has since been sharing his insights in one-to-one and group discussions with seekers in search of the direct experience of truth.

"It is the impersonal which lives through the personal. The impersonal is timeless, and does not undergo any change, nor does it seek, or become. The impersonal simply IS. It is neither far away, nor divided from the present moment. To awaken is to see the end of the dream world of the personal, and to see the impersonal as the only underlying truth of life."
